

Adan Martinez Bio

Adan Martinez is a pianist with over 10 years of musical experience. He picked up the piano as an art project in high school, and it started a lifelong musical journey in the classical style. His style blends whole-body movements, musical storytelling and personal freedom to craft music unique to the piano. He has been playing at Lewis University for over 3 years, accompanying singers, giving recitals and studying music under the tutelage of Leandro Lopez Varady. His favorite piano compositions to play are the great works of Bach and Chopin.

He is currently obtaining his master's degree in physics and chemistry at Lewis University. In his spare time he likes to cook, exercise, and watch movies.

Adan teaches students that playing piano is an art form through which one can express, challenge and develop himself in the ways of the old piano masters. He is bilingual and offers piano lessons in both English and Spanish.